Bird Checklist Curaçao 2024

Bird Watching Curaçao

NOVEMBER 21 2024

- ➔ 5 new species recorded
- ➔ Several first records in decades

Colophon

This checklist is produced by Bird Watching Curaçao, a group of bird watchers on the island of Curaçao dedicated to bird monitoring, education and information. It is free to download the full document.

This list has been produced to assist local birders and visiting birders with an updated bird checklist of the island including all breeding birds, migratory birds and incidental bird visitors recorded on the island.

The list includes scientific names and names in English and Dutch, and as of this edition also the local Papiamentu names, if existing. The list is based on historical records combined with new records collected on ebird.org.

Changes in this third edition

The first bird checklist for birding purposes was published by the Bird Watching Curaçao team in May 2022. Since then this document was downloaded from our website over 700 times. The 2nd updated edition was published in September 2023 and was downloaded almost 400 times.

Local birders on the island are on the lookout for new observations almost every day and continue to find new visiting species almost every year. In the months since publishing the first edition a total of 9 new bird species have been added to the checklist, and a total of 6 since publishing the 2nd edition. Bird watching on the island is an ever evolving pleasure with many surprises every single year.

We do include bird species that are most likely escapees or were released from cages. Many of these birds that came into the wild in the recent past have thrived in the local, usually urban, circumstances and now have established stable populations with local breeding in the wild. Some of the escapees, especially the bright parakeet/parrot species, Agapornis parrots for example, often have a grim fate as they can easily be grabbed by local birds of prey such as the American kestrel and usually will not survive for long.

Another change in this third edition of the bird checklist is the inclusion of local Papiamentu names besides the Dutch, English and Scientific names which were already a part of the checklist. The Papiamentu names are based on what is published in the book 'Birds of Aruba, Curaçao & Bonaire by De Boer, Newton en Restall.

Updates scientific names in ornithology

There are some minor changes in scientific names of certain birds based on ongoing discussions and research by ornithologists in which DNA results provide new insights.

These are the birds with an updated scientific name:

- The Double-striped Thick-knee is now called Hesperoburhinus bistriatus (it was Burhinus bistriatus)
- The Least Bittern is now called Botaurus exilis (it was Ixobrychus exilis)
- The Cattle Egret has become the Western Cattle Egret with the scientific name of Ardea ibis (it was Bubulcus ibis)

New species recorded

As mentioned above six (6) new species of birds have been registered for Curaçao in the period of September 2023 to November 2024.

1. Northern pintail (Anas acuta), recorded for the first time on Curaçao on November 16 2023 in the area of the RAMSAR-site Muizenberg Dam by Nelly Rigot. Photo by Nelly Rigot.

2. Limpkin (Aramus guarauna), recorded for the first time on March 12 2024 in the protected area of Kabouterbos, a small wooded area in the middle of a very populated area, by Kasper Sommer. The bird was spotted for a couple of weeks afterwards. Photo by Rob Wellens.

3. Marbled Godwit (Limosa fedoa) was spotted for the first time on August 10 2023 on the RAMSAR-site and IBA (Important Bird Area) of Klein Curaçao by observer Jeroen Brandjes. No pictures are available of the bird, and it took some time to validate the species for the island. The observer included an extensive description of the bird, based on which the species was ultimately approved.
4. Lined seedeater (Sporophila lineola) was spotted for the first time on July 9 2024 by Rob Wellens in the area of Dam Westpunt. This species was previously recorded for Curaçao but was at that time apparently misidentified. This previous observation has now been identified as a Lesson's seedeater (Sporophila bouvronides) and has now been corrected on the E-bird checklist which now includes both species. Photo by Nelly Rigot.

5. Olive-sided flycatcher (Contopus cooperi) was spotted for the first time on May 4 2024 in the area of the RAMSAR-site Muizenberg Dam by Javier Diaz.

6. Ruddy-breasted Seedeater (Sporophila minuta) was spotted for the first time on April 15 2024 in the protected area of Shete Boka by Phil Tizzard. Based on its description, as no photos were made during the encounter, and intensive communication with Mr. Tizzard, local birdwatchers went out of their way to find the bird in the mentioned area. It was not found there again, however a couple of weeks later a Ruddy-breasted Seedeater was spotted and photographed in the area of Dam Westpunt, where it stayed for several days. Photo by Nelly Rigot.

Three other bird species were registered for the first time on the island. All were spotted only once, and are presumed to be escapees that were recaptured. They are not included as first records:

1. Monk Parakeet (Myiopsitta monachus)
2. Yellow-crowned Parakeet (Cyanoramphus auriceps)
3. Scarlet macaw (Ara macao)

Bird species seen after a long period

Several bird species were spotted after being absent for a long period of time in the last year:

1. Yellow-bellied Sapsucker (Sphyrapicus varius), seen for the first time in November 2024, since the '90's.
2. Masked Duck (Nomonyx dominicus), seen for the first time in November 2024 since the '90's.
3. Comb Duck (Sarkidiornis sylvicola), seen for the first time in November 2023 since March 1971. Photo of Masked Duck on the left by Rob Wellens and photo of Comb Duck on the right by Nelly Rigot.

Therefore they are not included in the species list or in the list of first records. The Scarlet macaw is presumably a caged animal that is allowed to roam free occasionally. It was not seen again after the first sighting.
